What kind of game is evolution worlds?

Evolution Worlds is a true role-playing adventure game where you as the player become an adventurer intent on unraveling the mysteries of an ancient civilization. Boy adventurer Mag Launcher and the mysterious little girl, Linear, leave their rustic hometown of Pannam Town together with Mag's butler Gre and Chain, the only daughter of the Gun clan who has a longtime rivalry with the Launcher family, in search of "Evolutia, the legendary Cyframe" in this exciting story filled with battles against many enemies.

It's time to begin your adventure!

As a boy living in Pannam Town, Mag Launcher dreams of becoming a first-class adventurer like his parents.

While the first-class Launcher family had produced generations of famous adventurers, the current clan boasts no notable achievements, and has now arrived at the brink of ruin. Both of Mag's parents were lost on an adventure from which they never returned, so it fell upon young Mag to become head of the Launcher family. Many ancient ruins are found near Mag's home in Pannam Town, which is popular with adventurers who travel from other countries to excavate the ruins. Like the other adventurers, Mag has also spent his days in pursuit of adventures and the exploration of ruins.

Linear, the little girl, can always be found at Mag's side while he explores ancient sites. When she first appeared on the Launcher's doorstep three years ago, Linear carried a letter written by Mag's father. The letter said only "Mag, protect this girl Linear." Under the watchful eye of his faithful butler Gre, Mag has become proficient in the use of the Cyframe and is now leaving on adventures with Linear...

the story

Tens of thousands of years have passed since the demise of an ancient advanced civilization. The story is happening in 930. According to the Western calendar, the subsequent human civilization has finally evolved to the level of being able to build submarines and aircraft. A special group of people are able to use a Cyframe, one of the ancient tools excavated from the ruins of the ancient civilization. Known as the "adventurers" or "Cyframe users," they get jobs from a research institute called the Society, and they use Cyframes to explore the ruins.

Character Bios

Mag Launcher

A young adventurer from Pannam Town, he is the youthful head of the Launcher family, which has produced generations of famous adventurers. Powerfully affected by having two adventurers as parents, Mag intends to become a first-rate adventurer, too.

Mag is usually cheerful and spirited, but he can also be short-tempered and easily provoked. Most importantly, though, he never gives up on anything. Mag uses a magic hand-held Cyframe called the Airacomet.

Linear Cannon

A taciturn young girl with a mysterious past, she appeared at the Launcher household out of the blue three years ago, bringing with her a letter from Mag's father.

Linear rarely speaks, and when she does she only addresses Mag. She always accompanies Mag on his journeys to explore ruins. She is self-conscious about being different from other people.

Gre Nade

The butler of the Launcher household, Gre is the quintessential gentleman who always takes care of Mag, calling him "Master Mag." He is struggling to make Mag into a first-rate adventurer to surpass even his parents.

Despite his frail appearance, he is actually quite a reliable ally in combat and adventure. He is not a Cyframe user, but gives Mag powerful support using his favorite hunting gun.

Chain Gun

Chain is the only daughter of the Gun clan, longtime rivals of the Launcher family.

With no boys to continue their legacy, the Gun family practically forced the girl Chain into special education to transform her into an adventurer. There has been bitter enmity between the Launchers and the Guns for generations, but Chain has a crush on Mag. She is selfish, has a violent temper, and can't stand to be second at anything. She is Mag's equal in ability as an adventurer. She uses a huge sword-type Cyframe, which she carries on her back.

Pepper Box

Pepper is a wandering female adventurer from another country. Cheerful, lively, and good-natured, she is also wild and sexy, a dynamic and exciting adult woman.

She befriends Mag's party in an unexpected way. She uses a bazooka-type Cyframe she wears at her hip.

Eugene Leopold

The eldest son of Commandant Erich of the 8th Empire, Eugene Leopold is the commander of the 8th Imperial Army. He is searching for a legendary Cyframe called "Evolutia."

Carcano

The boss of a gang of bandits making Museville its territory, Carcano is a grim man who looks good in a beard. He seems to have his eye on the expensive ancient artifacts owned by the Society. He uses a huge cylindrical Cyframe mounted on his left arm.

Yurka

Yurka is a mysterious boy who appears in front of Linear, who is resting at the hotel after Mag and the others arrive in Museville. He appears to know something important about Linear's true form. It is completely unknown whether he is friend or foe.

The player leaves on fantastic adventures!

- Successfully complete explorations of ruins to become a first-rate adventurer.
- Find the mysterious Cyframe "Evolutia."

Flow of the Game

There are two major stages on which Mag and company play out their adventures. The first stage involves adventures based from Mag's hometown of Pannam Town. Once you have finished your adventures in Pannam Town, you can then play on the stage of Museville, a somewhat larger city.

When leaving the town of Museville for one of the ruins, rather than going in a flying boat as you did in Pannam Town, you now use the world map screen. You can use this screen to pick the ruins you want to explore.

Also, upon reentering a dungeon you entered previously, you can pick the floor on which to start. Use the Control Stick or press on the + Control Pad Up or Down to pick the ruin you wish to conquer and use the A Button to enter. A new adventure will start immediately.

The Society makes arrangements for you to explore ruins. You must make your arrangements here or you cannot enter the ruins. As an academic research institute dedicated to studying the ancient civilization, the Society will recommend you for exploring successfully defeating the boss in the ruins. Also, they will give you a good price when you sell expensive evaluation items and other items you find in the ruins. In contrast to the Society office in Pannam Town, here you get ruins exploration jobs from President Whitehead on the second floor rather than from the receptionist. You cannot enter the ruins unless you get a job from Whitehead.

Station

The intercontinental railroad that Mag and company ride into town stops here. The train has not been running since an attack by bandits. No one knows when the train will start running again.

Battle Formations

Combat is conducted according to a command-battle scheme where the waiting time varies depending on the action. However, the length of the waiting time depends not only on the action taken, but also on the “formation.”

The formation refers to whether or not the characters are placed in a three-by-three grid of nine squares. In combat, the formation has a major effect on the attack and defense strengths of enemies and allies, so depending on the character placement, a party with the same members can vary quite a bit in strength.

Characters in the front row absorb huge amounts of damage from enemy attacks, but the damage they inflict on the enemy is also increased by that much. In contrast, in the back row, the damage from enemy attacks is small, but you also inflict little damage on the enemy. Characters on the middle row experience effects in between those in the front and back rows.

However, attacks with missile weapons and special attacks can inflict a constant amount of damage regardless of the distance between the attacker's position and the enemy. In addition, the use of special attacks and enemy attacks may change your formation.

Basically, it is best to place Mag and Chain and other attacking characters in the front row. Conversely, Linear and Gre and other support and recovery characters should be placed in the middle row or back rows for a well-balanced formation.

Formations

	Attack strength	Defense strength	Critical rate	Waiting time after command execution
Front row	High	Low	Normal	Short
Middle row	Normal	Normal	Low	Normal
Back row	Low	High	Zero	Long

dungeons

The ruins of the ancient civilization, which serve as the main setting for your adventures, are called “dungeons.” Broadly speaking, the dungeons are divided into two types: random dungeons that change their layout each time you enter, and predefined dungeons that have the same layout no matter how many times you enter.

Random Dungeons

The internal layout of random dungeons changes constantly and they do not let you return to the previous floor. Once you enter this type of dungeon, you cannot leave without using a transporter or an escape item.

Predefined Dungeons

This type of dungeon always has the same internal layout and lets you go up and down the staircases freely. Also, you are able to leave or enter the dungeon via the entrance.

combat

Any contact with monsters lurking in a dungeon automatically begins combat. If monsters are caught by surprise from behind, combat will begin with the player in an advantageous position.

Conversely, if the player party is caught from behind, then combat will begin with the player at a disadvantage.

Differences in Combat Depending on Surprise

• Catching the Enemy from Behind. This lets you do a surprise attack. The enemy formation is reversed front-to-back and the player side gets to begin actions first, giving the player an advantage in combat.

• Caught by the Enemy from Behind. The player-side party formation is reversed front-to-back and after the start of combat, the enemy side gets to take actions first, giving the player side a disadvantage in combat.

• Other Types of Contact. Combat starts with both sides under mutually equitable conditions.

Start of Combat

Combat starts with the character with the highest Agility parameter, either friend or foe, taking action first. In addition, depending on the action selected, the same character may have to wait a different amount of time until the next turn. The action meter displayed on the right side of the screen lets you check on the order of actions of the various characters. The characters appearing higher on the meter wait a shorter time before their next turn.

End of Combat

Combat ends when all of the enemy characters on the screen are defeated, or when all of either the friends or foes have run away. The experience points earned and other combat results are then displayed.

If All Party Members are Exhausted

If all of the characters are exhausted and unable to fight, then a rescue team dispatched from the Society will rescue the party from the dungeon, except in certain cases such as battles with bosses.

Remember that the cost of the rescue will be added to the Launcher family debt.

The debt does not greatly affect the progress of the game, but try to pay it back to the Society receptionist when you think of it.

Even if all party members are exhausted, this does not affect their levels, experience points, or the money or items carried.

Get Items After Battle

Sometimes enemies drop items after a battle and the party gets them. If the party inventory is full, the found item can be thrown away, or a different item in the party inventory can be thrown away to make room for the found item.

Input of Combat Commands

- Normal Attacks: Mag, Chain, and the other Cyframe users attack with their Cyframe. Linear, Gre, and the others attack with the weapons they are equipped with. The FP gauge recovers slightly after this action.
- Special Attacks: Cyframe users attack with special attacks that depend on the Cyframe, while Linear and Gre use special attacks they have learned. Using a special attack consumes FP and the waiting time after using a special attack is longer than the waiting time after other commands.
- Special Skills: Special skills don't consume FP, unlike the special attacks. Once a special skill has been used in a battle, it won't be available for a while. After a few battles, it will become available again. Special skills will get more powerful as they are used in a battle.
- Items: Use attacking or healing items in a battle. Select this command, and the list of items available during a battle will be displayed. FP recovers a little after an item is used.
- Move: Allow characters to move one step forward or backwards in the fighting grid. FP recovers a little after a character moves.
- Defense: Characters take less damage from enemies. FP recovers a little after a character defends.
- Escape: Allow characters to escape from a battle. However, sometimes it fails and never works against boss characters.

special attacks and their effects

Special Attacks

Powerful special attacks can be launched by consuming a fixed amount of FP. Once you have accumulated a certain amount of TP, you can learn a new special attack by consuming the TP. A special attack learned first in combat can be used once without consuming FP. Note that in the case of a Cyframe user, the special attacks that can be used are limited by the parts installed.

This section presents some of the special attacks or skills specific to each character. Accumulate TP to learn new special attacks and tune up your Cyframe at the Cyframe Upgrade Shop to be able to use even more special attacks. Also, under certain conditions, even characters who are not Cyframe users can launch special attacks.

	Moon Cutter	Attack enemies in semicircle with a slash.
	Circle Cutter	Attack enemies in semicircle with double slashes.

Elemental Attacks

Launching an elemental attack against an enemy who has a weakness against that element will cause more damage than normal. Conversely, a certain elemental attack used on an enemy that is resistant to that element results in less damage than normal.

- Fire: These attacks have fire and heat effects, and are most effective on enemies resistant to water.
- Ice: These attacks have ice and cold effects, and are most effective on enemies resistant to fire.
- Lightning: These attacks have electrical effects and are most effective on mechanical enemies and ice elemental enemies.

status effects

Status effects limit the actions of characters in some way while moving through the dungeon or in combat. Status restoration can be done with items or skills. In addition, if combat ends while the normal status is still not restored, all status effects are automatically restored except for exhaustion. The status effects are ranked from least to most serious as follows: skill block < confusion < blindness < sleep < paralysis < poison < exhaustion. Depending on the situation, more than one status effect might occur at once. For example, a confused character might fall into a trap or be attacked and be blinded. However, a confused character cannot be attacked and fall into the skill-blocked state. A character suffering from a certain status effect at that time is not vulnerable to a less serious status effect.

Skill Block

Disable special attacks. Skills can be restored with an item or another member's skill.

Action meter icon: blue.

Confusion

Attack the party members or enemies randomly. Recover through use of an item or skill. Also, recover automatically when the character takes damage from an enemy's attack or after waiting for a few turns.

Blindness

Make it difficult for the character to dodge enemy attacks. Recover through use of an item or skill. In a dungeon, the screen gets dim and you can't really see the dungeon field.

Sleep

Characters fall asleep and cannot fight. Recover through use of an item or skill. Also, recover automatically when the character takes damage from an enemy's attack or after waiting for a few turns. If the party activates a sleep trap, the entire party falls asleep for a while. The party can wake up early by pressing the A Button repeatedly.

Paralysis

The body stiffens and cannot fight. Recover through use of an item or skill. Also, recover automatically after waiting a few turns. In a dungeon, the party moves slowly while affected.

Poison

When poisoned, the character takes damage every turn. Damage gets bigger with every turn. In a dungeon, the character takes damage even while walking. Recover with an item.

Exhaustion

When the character's HP gets to zero, the character will no longer be able to fight in a battle. Recover through use of an item or skill. However, if all the party members get exhausted, it's over.

Q and A with mag and gre

Q: What do I do to go on an adventure to the ruins?

A: First go to the academic research institute called the Society and get a job. In Pannam Town, the Society receptionist will make arrangements for you to enter the ruins. Be careful because in Museville you must go to the office of President Whitehead to get a job.

Q: How do I get ready to go into the ruins?

A: Before entering the ruins, you must make careful preparations. Buy the items you need at the Item Shop or Adventurer's Hut, and don't forget to go to the Upgrade Shop to upgrade and tune up your Cyframe. Items can be broadly divided into attack types and defense types. Be sure you understand the elemental nature of each dungeon and buy your items accordingly.

If you will not be bringing along Miss Linear, you should make sure you have plenty of recovery items.

Also, you can buy equipment at the Adventurer's Hut. Don't forget that each ruin is different in nature, so be sure to equip yourself appropriately to match the ruin you are facing.

Q: How do I put a party together?

A: Your party can have up to three members. After you get a job at the Society, you can invite one of the three people waiting in the town or buildings to join the party. The characters can be broadly divided into attack types, support types, and all-around types. For example, you and Miss Chain are attack types, while Miss Linear and I are support types. Although your party may consist of up to three people, you and Miss Linear can go off to explore the ruins with just the two of you.

Q: Where do I go to get on the seaplane?

A: The seaplane is kept at the airfield. To get to the airfield, from the house, turn right and follow the road. The big red airplane at the airfield is your seaplane, Master Mag. The seaplane is very convenient for getting to the ruins.

Q: What do I do to upgrade and tune up my Cyframe?

A: You should go visit the Cyframe Upgrade Shop. They will boost the level of your Cyframe parts and increase the number of slots. However, it takes money to boost the Cyframe level, so after returning from the ruins you ought to get your reward at the Society first. If your Cyframe level is low, even if you are able to defeat ordinary monsters, you will have a hard time in the boss battles. And if you bring in the Upgrade Kit found in the ruins, you will be able to use many more types of special attacks. In your case, Master Mag, the special attacks you can launch from the start use the hand and hammer parts, but if you bring in the Upgrade Kit and parts to do the upgrade, you will then be able to launch special attacks that use the spray and spinner or other parts.

Q: How do I get an advantage in combat?

A: Try to sneak up and contact the enemy from behind. Once combat starts after you sneak behind the enemy without being noticed, the surprised enemy cannot take any action for a while. By gaining surprise, you may be able to defeat the enemy and end combat without even being hit.

But watch out if you are contacted from behind!

If you are surprised, the party characters cannot move for a while and will suffer many enemy attacks. In addition, when surprised, your party formation is reversed, so the weak characters normally placed in the last row are moved to the front row, putting you at a great disadvantage in combat, so be very careful not to be taken from behind.

Q: Do the experience points, levels, and items earned in adventures in Pannam Town carry over to the adventures in Museville?

A: Yes, they do. All the experience points you earned in Pannam Town are carried over. Try to get through as much combat as possible in Pannam Town to boost your level and power and make combat even more interesting in Museville.
