Which Officer to Use...

In VS. Mode, all weapons perform up to 6 combination attacks. Choose an officer with skills and abilities that are effective under the course rules.

Vanquish

Attack ability is important. A character that can take on several enemies at once works best.

Melee

Abilities are not really an issue. An officer who can knock an enemy flying in numerous ways has the advantage.

Pilfer

Speed is the most important ability. Get the treasure to the merchants as fast as possible.

Endurance

The most important abilities are strength and defense. Let your opponent do the fighting, just sit back and present an impregnable defense.

Vanquish

Fight next to an item container.

● Rules

- ◆ Use "Announce" when the summons gauge is full to surround your opponent with powerful enemies.
- ◆ The player will be revived as many times as needed.

● Summon the Enemy

A player that gets the "statuette", an item unique to the Vanquish course, can acquire summons points. The gauge to the right of the screen increases with each summons point acquired. The larger the gauge, the stronger the troop that can be summoned. To summon, perform "Announce" (R3 button).

Pilfer

The blue point is the merchant

Don't let the officers find you...

Score more points than your opponent!

● Rules

- ◆ Find treasures and take them to a merchant to trade for points. The player with the most points at the end of the time limit wins!
- ◆ Carrying too many items will reduce your speed.
- ◆ Items will be dropped if you fall.
- ◆ The player will be revived as many times as needed.

● The Weight of the Treasure

There are three types of treasures with varying weights. If the weight of the treasures being carried exceeds a certain amount, movement will be slow. If it exceeds the maximum weight limit, you will be unable to pick up any more. The faster the officer, the lower the maximum weight limit will be.

Treasure Bag	Double Treasure Bag	Treasure Chest
 1 POINT	 3 POINTS	 6 POINTS
A normal officer can carry 15 of these.	Twice as heavy as a treasure bag.	Three times heavier than a treasure bag.

Melee

Send them flying with a charge attack.

Make enemy troops fall off to earn points.

● Rules

- ◆ Earn points by knocking enemy troops off of the walls. The one with the most points when time runs out wins.
- ◆ Knocking an enemy off earns 1 point. Knocking your opponent off earns 5 points.
- ◆ Troopers can not be destroyed unless they are knocked off.
- ◆ The lower the strength of the trooper, the farther he will fly when hit.
- ◆ The player will be revived as many times as needed.

Endurance

Be careful of damage from poison bogs also.

Survive longer than your opponent!

● Rules

- ◆ If your opponent is destroyed before you are, you win.
- ◆ Enemy officers will retreat after a certain period of time.
- ◆ Enemy officers grow stronger with each new appearance.

You can use Political suggestions to develop new “Smith Products” or to conquer a region that has that product already available.

Grand General and Strategist

With the political suggestion, “Recommend,” you can appoint one Grand General and Strategist from among your officers. Not only is priority given to the suggestions of these two officer positions, but they also have the following additional effects.

Troops	Total number of troops under your officers' command.

Force's Officer Count

After obtaining officers through proposals or increasing your Kingdom through invasion, you increase your force's officer pool. The number of attached officers (recruiting limit) in one force is dependent upon the number of regions that force governs. If a Force has only one region, the maximum number of generals and lieutenants is 3. →P.18 This number will increase as the number of regions increase (see right table). Note however that the number of officers can not exceed 10.

No. of Areas	Generals	Lieutenants
1	3	3
2	4	4
3	5	5
4	6	6
5	7	7
6	8	8
7	9	9
8+	10	10

- *If you go over your officer limit, you will be forced to release an existing officer.
- *If you lose a region to an attacking force your recruiting limit will not decrease.

Advancing Your Policies

◆ Explaining basic rules to advance your policies.

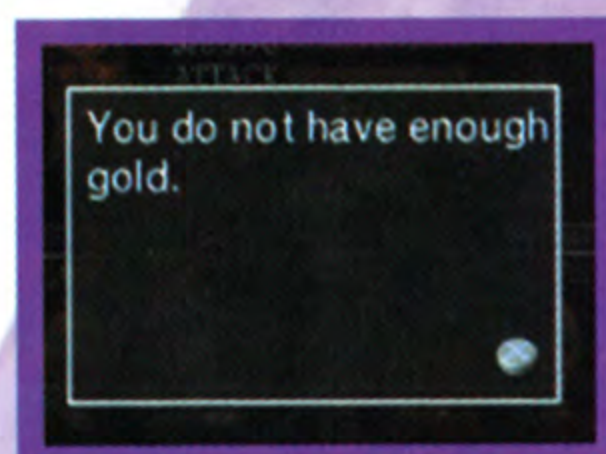

Two Policies Will Be Implemented

Carefully consider all proposals.

Up to four Generals will suggest two policies each. When you choose an officer, both of that officer's proposals will be implemented (you are not allowed to implement only one policy).

Cost and Gold

Without gold, even smart policies cannot be implemented.

There is a cost to implementing a policy. Highly effective policies are more expensive. If the cost exceeds your amount of gold, you cannot implement the policy. Gold will increase at the beginning of each turn. The amount of gold received is your "Base Revenue" (Normally 1000) plus "Area Revenue" (the amount of gold from each region). As you acquire more regions, your revenue will increase.

Kinds of Policies

With Policies, you can develop products (equipment, etc.), heal troops, or recruit officers. Refer to the chart for additional information.

Product Development	Speed up product (item) production and increase item levels.	→P.26
Officer Affairs	Acquire free officers and recruit from other forces.	→P.26
Diplomacy	Create alliances with other forces and exchange products.	→P.27
Battle Tactics	Create battle plans.	→P.27
Heal Forces	Replenish troops weakened in battle.	→P.28
Reinforce Military	Reinforce weapons to give troops the advantage in battle.	→P.28
Government	Please or anger the people of your kingdom.	→P.29

Which Policy Should I Choose?

The policy you select could determine the outcome of battle. Please consider your choices carefully.

First, Build Strength

- You will want to have at least three generals and lieutenants.

Up to six officers can participate in battle- three generals and three lieutenants. If you have fewer than five generals, choose a policy focused on finding good officers.

- If you are surrounded by the enemy, form an alliance with someone.

When surrounded by enemies, you might find yourself always on the defensive. If you feel that there are too many enemies surrounding you, try to negotiate an alliance with one of them. After an alliance is formed and a joint attack chosen, you will have an ally at your side when you attack.

- Don't forget to level up your items

If your items (items that can be equipped) become powerful, you will have a definite advantage in battle. You should actively improve your items and develop new ones.

- If there is no suitable policy

There is no need to choose a policy if there is not one that you like. If you save your gold you will be able to choose a more effective policy in the future.

Before the Heat of Battle

- Your first priority is troop recovery for officers with depleted troops.

When you have only a few troops remaining, you are at an overwhelming disadvantage in battle. A unit that has decreased in size does not recover over time. Make sure to replenish troops during the politics stage.

- If troops are at full strength, implement a policy that would give you the best advantage in battle.

If troop strength is not a concern, choose policies from Battle Tactics and Reinforce Military. If you have advantageous items, it is good strategy to speed up manufacturing.

The people will repay you when it is most needed. Incredible!

If the people are satisfied with your government, local troops will sometimes help in times when defense is needed. On the other hand, if the government is repressive, local troops may join the enemy in times of danger. Also, some officers have goals relating to either good or poor government.

Preparing for Battle

◆ After executing politics, it is time to do battle!

Select Battle

Arrows display the battle objectives of other kingdoms.

There are three types of battles: Invade, Defend, and Joint Attack.

Choose a battle type, and then choose the region where the battle will occur. To go to the next turn without fighting, choose "Skip Battle".

*Press the ○ button to review information and exchange officers and lieutenants. → P.18

Invade	Attack a region under a different ruler. If you win, you gain control of that region.
Defend	Defend an area under attack by another force. If an area is attacked two times in a row without being detected, it will be lost to the enemy.
Joint Attack	When attacking (Joint Attack) or defending (Help Ally) with an ally, one officer can be sent as a backup. This can only be used upon request from an allied force.

Selecting the Battleground

Head for Dong Zhuo's base of Luo Yang. Capture Lu Bu!

Choose a battleground for products or abilities...

Compare the strength (officers, troops) of regions surrounding your own. If you think you can conquer any of these regions, compare their products and choose an area based on the product you desire most.

Choose a battleground for the Base...

Defeating the Base (the region where the ruler resides) of a force that controls several regions is very difficult because reinforcements may come. However, if your attempt is successful, you win all of the regions under that enemy's control, and capture all of its officers.

Form an Army

Compare troop strength using the bar on the top of the screen.

After selecting a battle you will assemble your army. First, choose officers to take part in the battle. A total of three generals and three lieutenants, can be selected. The player will control one of the participating generals.

*Lieutenants cannot use skills. →P.18

Equipping Items

Don't be stingy with your items in battle.

At the pre-battle screen, choose "Equipment" to view your current weapon and equipped items. Once used, an item will not be available until it is reproduced. Manufacturing times will vary.

Reviewing Objectives

Determine your marching route based on the location of the Enemy Main Camp.

At the pre-battle screen, choose "Objectives" to review conditions for the battle.

Normally, the objective is to overrun the Enemy's Main Camp. Before battle, check your position and the best route to your goal. Then press "Start" to begin the battle!

Empire Mode Battles

- ◆ Control your chosen general in battle.

Victory

Capture bases one by one on your way to the Enemy Main Camp!

When invading, capture all of the bases adjacent to your main camp and the enemy camp. (See "Capturing a Base" below) Win by capturing the Enemy Main Camp or by defeating the enemy Ruler. When defending, destroy the enemy commander, or protect your main camp until time runs out to win. You can review the enemy commander's information in the Information Screen.

Capturing a Base

Wipe out all enemy troops around the base!

● Defeat Enemy Troops

Capture a base by defeating all enemy troops protecting it. A captured base becomes an allied base.

● The Function of Allied Bases

A base will send supplementary troops depending on the overall troop strength. As long as it is not under attack, the supply point in the center of the base will supply health items periodically.

Defending Isolated Bases

Bases that are isolated (a base that is not connected to the main camp) cannot receive recovery items and supplemental forces. Isolated bases are difficult to defend. Capture bases along a route from your main camp to the enemy camp.

In the example to the right, the graph shows several approaches to capturing bases.

1. G → F → C → Enemy Main Camp
2. E → F → C → Enemy Main Camp
3. D → A → B → Enemy Main Camp

Controlled Area

Plunging into enemy areas alone is dangerous.

The area connecting allied headquarters and allied bases is under your control. Within that area your forces become better fighters. On the other hand, in areas under enemy control, the enemy forces are stronger, and battles become more difficult.

*On the map, the blue area is under allied control and the red area represents enemy territory. ➔P.39

Supplementing Troops

Within an allied base troops are automatically arranged.

A base supplements troops based on the amount of troops an officer has. Officers with depleted troop strength should be restored during the politics session. Otherwise, they will be at a disadvantage in battle because the bases will be slow to supplement their troops.

Skills

Officers each have one of a variety of skills. Non-player generals can use their skill only one time in battle. Skills can be reviewed in "Unit Info" in the Information Screen. ➔P.36

*The general or lieutenant controlled by the player cannot use skills.

Skill Guide
		Negotiate	Convince nearby enemy troops to become allies.
Charge	Strengthen personal troops, head for the Enemy Main Camp.	Support	Local troops appear as reinforcements; they will do things like confuse enemy ranks or reinforce ally bases.
Shield	Strengthen personal troops to defend a base.	Rally	Increase the attack strength of the entire ally force temporarily.
Taunt	Provoke the enemy and lure them away from their base.	Encourage	Temporarily increase the defensive strength of the entire allied force.
Ambush	An assault unit appears in the enemy's vicinity and attacks.	Hawkeye	Repel an enemy ambush with a larger ambush.

Army Morale

Troop abilities increase when morale is high.

Morale and troop numbers can be confirmed in the Unit Info.

● Normal Change

When a battle begins morale will gradually increase. At a set time after a unit reaches its max morale, the morale will return to its base level. Then this process will repeat. The base morale level is higher when allied troops outnumber enemy troops.

● Change and the State of the Army

The morale of a unit whose leader has been destroyed, or of a unit isolated in enemy territory could drop to zero. If an officer uses a skill, morale can instantly reach its max level.

Enemy Officer Revival

Do not underestimate duels. The enemy will be desperate.

Enemy generals and lieutenants that have been destroyed return after a short time and are stronger than before. An officer who has been defeated and revived three times will challenge you to a duel if you meet him or her again. Should you accept and win the duel, the enemy will not return.

*Officers that have few troops will sometimes permanently leave the battle after being defeated.

Information Screen

Review the battle status and objectives. Allies have the advantage!

In Empire mode, press the START button during battle to bring up the Information Screen. At the Information Screen you can check the battle-field map, confirm morale and troop numbers, and save game data.

After the Battle Ends

- ◆ Points are awarded depending on an officer's actions.

Individual Points

It is best to control the officer you wish to strengthen.

After battle, the points acquired by the player-controlled general will be displayed.

Points are given based on total KOs, worthy opponents defeated, and a bonus.

Using the policy "Point Increase" before battle will double these points.

Army Points and Results

Points increase if damage is low.

If victorious, army points (points acquired by all officers) and each officer's results are displayed. There are no army points after a defeat.

After Winning a Battle

A successful invasion will expand your area, and allow you to have more generals and lieutenants. Also, you will gain control of all of the products of your new region. If you capture an enemy officer, you can choose to either promote or dismiss that officer. It will cost anywhere from 1700 to 4000 gold to employ an officer. If you want more officers, be sure to head into battle with gold to spare.

After Losing a Battle

When an invasion fails, sometimes the officers that participated in the battle are captured. The captured officers are either hired by the enemy or set loose as free officers. When a defensive battle is lost, that area falls to enemy control. The game is over when you lose all of your regions.
