THE SECRET LIFE OF MONSTERS

As sleep falls across the world, children lie in bed just waiting for monsters to pop out through the closet door and scare them silly. Monsters don't really want to scare little kids. They just need the scream.

Each child's scream is collected by Monsters, Incorporated, the biggest scream processing factory in Monstropolis. All of Monstropolis is powered by scream energy; every TV, every car, every light bulb.

Monsters, Incorporated has a file on every child and every closet door in the human world. Every night, doors are selected from a huge door vault and elite Monsters, Incorporated Kid Scarers sneak through closet doors and scare kids until they scream. Meanwhile, special scream extraction equipment captures every screech for processing. But Monstropolis is having a power shortage. These days, kids are harder to scare, resulting in less screams. Monsters, Incorporated CEO, Henry J. Waternoose is always looking for ways to increase scream production.

The top Kid Scarer at Monsters, Incorporated is a huge furry monster with horns named James P. Sullivan. His friends call him Sulley. Everyone in Monstropolis admires scarers and everyone loves Sulley. His best friend is Mike Wazowski, a fast-talking, one-eyed little green monster who runs the scream equipment and closet door when Sulley goes on scare missions. Sulley and Mike are celebrities and at the top of their game. But the tables are about to be turned. The monsters are about to be scared out of their wits.

One secret that children don't know is that monsters are terrified of them. What gives every monster goose bumps is the risk of direct contact with a human child. Kids are toxic! Humans must never cross into the monster world.

Catastrophe strikes when Sulley accidentally lets a cute little girl named Boo slip through her closet door into Monstropolis. Sulley and Mike's perfect lives come crashing down as they frantically try to return the girl back to the human world.

Now you and Sulley have to rescue the future of Monsterkind, uncover a sinister plot and get Boo back to bed where she belongs.
